Information for You: Cancer Bereavement Services

When you have lost a loved one, it can be difficult to manage your rapidly changing emotions and to cope with your feelings. Some people find it useful to talk to others, whilst some feel they need time alone. The ward nurses or your Clinical Nurse Specialist will be able to talk to you if required and listed below are some sources of support and information that may be of help at this time.

If you have any questions about this information please speak to the Cancer Information Specialist in the Cancer Information Centre or call 024 7696 6052.

The following information is available:

- University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire produce a booklet 'Information and advice for bereaved families and friends' which is usually given out following a death. This booklet explains the process of obtaining the death certificate and the formal steps that are required after a death.
- Counselling services: Some people find that after someone dies they require extra support to deal with the emotions that arise. The ward nurse, Clinical Nurse Specialist or Cancer Information Specialist who cared for your relative or friend can talk this through with you. They may also refer you to a counselling service within the hospital, or suggest that you contact a counsellor locally if this would help.
- Support services: Support for those who have been bereaved is available in the community not only from friends and family but from
