Driving after a stroke or TIA

Stroke advice:

You must not drive for a minimum of one month following a stroke. You do not need to inform DVLA in this first month. However, you must inform your insurance company that you have had a stroke. If you do not inform your company, you may find that your insurance is void.

At the end of the one month period, please discuss with your doctor whether you are able to return to driving.

One month after your stroke, you must inform DVLA if you have any ongoing effects from your stroke, such as:

- Weakness of the arms or legs
- Problems with your vision
- Problems with co-ordination
- Problems with memory or understanding
- Ongoing fatigue

You must also inform DVLA if any of the following apply:

- You have had a seizure of any kind, except for within 24 hours of the stroke happening.
- You have had brain surgery as part of the treatment for your stroke.
- You have had more than one stroke in the past three months.

Patient Information

- Your doctors have said they are concerned about your ability to drive.
- If you hold a LGV or PCV license.

Having ongoing problems following your stroke will not necessarily prevent you from driving. You may require a driving assessment, where the staff will assess your driving and advise you on the best way to proceed. For example you may need some adaptations made to your vehicle. You can refer yourself for an assessment. (See contact list.)

It is also recommended to see an optician if you have any concerns regarding your vision following your stroke.

TIA advice:

You must not drive for one month following a TIA (Transient Ischaemic Attack)

After one month, you may return to driving, provided you have not had another TIA.

If you have had more than one TIA over a short period of time, you will require three months free of further attacks before driving.

You must inform your insurance company that you have had a TIA. If you do not inform your company, you may find that your insurance is void.

LGV (Large Goods Vehicle) or PCV (Passenger Carrying Vehicle) holders

If you hold a LGV or PCV licence, you must tell DVLA immediately if you have had a TIA or a stroke. You are not allowed to drive this type of vehicle for one year. You may be able to return to driving these vehicles after this time, depending on your recovery and on the outcome of medical reports and tests.
